

II. - A, a merchant in Bangkok, has in his store motor cars for sale which have been sent to him by the Automobile Co. which is in London. When A sells a motor car to his customer B, the sale is for the benefit of the "Automobile Co.". However A himself is responsible to B for all consequences of the sale as if he were the owner. A could only be discharged of his responsibility if it was specified in the contract of sale that A is only the agent of the "Automobile Co." and that such Company remains liable to B as the seller of the motor car.

III. - A, in Bangkok, uses to take goods from B, C, etc. persons living in Bangkok and to deliver the same to the M. P. Shipping Co. for carriage. A is a Commission Agent. His relations to his principals B, C, etc. are governed by the Title on Agency, and if some damages would result from the carriage of the goods to the "M. P. Shipping Co.", A would be liable to the Company for such damage unless he has expressly notified the names of B, C, etc. and specified that he was acting for them.
