

15 ne semble qu'il faudrait le dire quelque part, d'autant que nos articles sur la promesse de vente, avec leur système de notification, ne conduisent nullement à cette conclusion;

b) ou admettre que la vente de la chose d'autrui est nulle; mais c'est encore un principe qui n'apparaît pas dans notre Code, encore que les articles 254, et 255 Code Civil, conduisent peut-être. C'est donc invoquer pour donner la réponse une théorie mal précisée.

J'aimerais mieux la 1ère. solution; mais il serait tout à fait dangereux de la laisser à la jurisprudence et de ne pas l'exprimer.

c) as soon as A has paid the twelfth instalment, which is a price, he has at his discretion completed the purchase as he was entitled to do; and he becomes an owner of it.

II. - The Eastern Co. and A could likewise agree that, at any time during the year, A may become the owner of the electric fan by paying, as a whole and as a price, to the Company the remaining monthly payment of 10 baht which are still due under the contract. This also is a contract of hire-purchase.
