

II. - Suppose that A has paid eleven times the monthly rent agreed. A is now a possessor with a right of option. A may return the thing to the Company and this would ^{I mean} ~~be~~ that he does not complete the sale. The Company would have been paid ~~for~~ the rent due for eleven months hire (probably a higher rent than in case of a real hire) and is not frustrated. ~~It~~ over, as a fact, it would never be the interest of A not to complete the sale, since by the payment of a small sum of money (twelfth instalment) he will become definitively the owner of the thing.
