

131. If the declaration of intention is made to a minor or a person adjudged incompetent at the time when he receives the declaration of intention, such declaration cannot be set up against him but this does not apply after his [legal] lawful representative has knowledge of it.

(J. 98)

132. – In the interpretation of a declaration of intention, the true intention is to be sought rather than the literal meaning of the words or expressions.

(G. 133).

131. – If the other party is a minor or has been adjudged incompetent at the time when he receives the declaration of intention, such declaration cannot be set up against him but this does not apply after his ^{legal} ~~lawful~~ representative has knowledge of it.

(J. 98)

132. – In the interpretation of a declaration of intention, the true intention is to be sought rather than the literal meaning of the words or expressions.

(G. 133).