

357[360]. – The provisions of Section 130 paragraph 2 do not apply, if the offerer has declared a contrary intention, or if before accepting the other party had notice of the fact of his death or loss of capacity.

(J. 525; c/p G. 153).

358[361]. – A contract between persons at a distance comes into existence at the time when the notice of acceptance reaches the offerer.

If according to the declared intention of the offerer or to a prevailing custom [ordinary usage] no notice of acceptance is necessary, the contract comes into existence at the time of the occurrence of fact which is considered as a declaration to accept.

(c/p Old text 118; J. 526 + 97; S.O. 10; G. 151; S. 130).

359[362]. – A person who advertises [by advertisement promises] that he will give a reward to whoever shall do a certain act is bound to give such reward to the [any] person who does the act, even if he [such person] did not act with a view to the re[w]ard.

(c/p Old text 131; c/p J. 529; c/p G. 657).

79/236

360. The provisions of section 130 paragraph 2 do not apply, if the offerer has declared a contrary intention, or if before accepting the other party had notice of the fact of his death or loss of capacity.
(J. 525; c/p G. 153).

361. – A contract between persons at a distance comes into existence at the time when the notice of acceptance reaches the offerer.

If according to the declared intention of the offerer or to a <sup>ordinary usage</sup> prevailing custom no notice of acceptance is necessary, the contract comes into existence at the time of the occurrence of the fact which is to be considered as a declaration of intention to accept.

(c/p Old text 118; J. 526 + 97; S.O. 10; G. 151; S. 130).

362. <sup>by advertisement - promises</sup> A person who advertises that he will give a reward to whosoever shall do a certain act is bound to give such reward to <sup>such person</sup> the person who does the act, even if <sup>any</sup> he did not act with a view to the reward.

(c/p Old text 131; c/p J. 529; c/p G. 657).