

404. – If the manager acts for one person, believing that he is acting for another person, only the former has the right and duties arising out of the management.

(Old text 169; G. 686).

405. – The provisions of the ten foregoing sections do not apply, if a person takes charge of the affair of another in the belief that it is his own.

If a person treats the affair of another as his own, although knowing that he is not entitled to do so, the principal may enforce the claims based on sections 395, 396, 399 and 400. If he does enforce them, he is liable to the manager as provided for in Section 402, paragraph 1.

(c/p Old text 168; G. 687).

404. – If the manager acts for one person, believing that he is acting for another person, only the former has the rights and duties arising out of the management.

(Old text 169; G. 686).

405. – The provisions of the ten foregoing sections do not apply, if a person takes charge of the affair of another in the belief that it is his own.

If a person treats the affair of another as his own, although knowing that he is not entitled to do so, the principal may enforce the claims based on sections 395, 396, 399 and 400. If he does enforce them, he is liable to the manager as provided for in section 402, paragraph 1.

(c/p Old text 168; G. 687).