

813. — The warehouseman is liable for any loss or damage caused to the goods unless he proves that such loss or damage has been caused by force majeure or by the nature of the goods.

814. — The warehouseman is liable for the loss or damage caused by apparent defects in the packing of the goods stored if he accepted them without reservation.

815. — The warehouseman is not liable for the loss or damage caused by non-apparent defects in the packing of the goods.

816. — If the goods are of a dangerous nature or are likely to cause injury to persons or property, the depositor must declare their nature to the warehouseman on making the contract of warehousing, otherwise he will be liable for any injury caused by them.

817. — A provision in a warehouse receipt excluding or limiting the liability of the warehouseman is void, unless the depositor expressly agreed to such exclusion or limitation of liability.

818. — The warehouseman is bound to allow the holder of the warehouse receipt and the holder of the warrant to inspect the goods at any reasonable intervals during business hours and to take samples.

813.—The warehouseman is liable for any loss or damage caused to the goods unless he proves that such loss or damage has been caused by force majeure or by the nature of the goods.

814.—The warehouseman is liable for the loss or damage caused by apparent defects in the packing of the goods stored if he accepted them without reservation.

815.—The warehouseman is not liable for the loss or damage caused by non-apparent defects in the packing of the goods.

816.—If the goods are of a dangerous nature or are likely to cause injury to persons or property, the depositor must declare their nature to the warehouseman on making the contract of warehousing, otherwise he will be liable for any injury caused by them.

817.—A provision in a warehouse receipt excluding or limiting the liability of the warehouseman is void, unless the depositor expressly agreed to such exclusion or limitation of liability.

818.—The warehouseman is bound to allow the holder of the warehouse receipt and the holder of the warrant to inspect the goods at any reasonable intervals during business hours and to take samples.