

Products are acquired at the time when they are severed from the thing.

F. 547, 582 to 586. S. 643. G. 99, 100. J. 88, 89.

9. — Interests of a thing denotes money or gain (such as rent, dividend on shares, interest on loans and debentures, etc.) obtained periodically by the owner from another person for the use of the thing by such other person.

Interests are calculated and acquired by day.

F. 586. J. 89.

10. — No real rights may be created other than those described by law.⁽¹⁾

F. 543. J. 175.

TITLE II.

Domain of the State.

11. — The domain of the State is divided into a public domain and a private domain.

F. 538 to 541, 717. G. 958, 959. J. 230. S. 659, 664, 718. T. 1 Sept. 1885.

(1) In addition to the real rights described in this Book (ownership, possession, servitudes), other real rights which are admitted by the Siamese legislation (lease, pledge, mortgage — which is never established by law — rights of retention and preferential rights) are dealt with in the Book on Obligations.

Products are acquired at the time when they are severed from the thing.

F. 547, 582 to 586. S. 643. G. 99, 100. J. 88, 89.

9.—Interests of a thing denotes money or gain (such as rent, dividend on shares, interest on loans and debentures, etc.) obtained periodically by the owner from another person for the use of the thing by such other person.

Interests are calculated and acquired by day.

F. 586. J. 89.

10.—No real rights may be created other than those described by law.⁽¹⁾

F. 543. J. 175.

TITLE II.

Domain of the State.

11.—The domain of the State is divided into a public domain and a private domain.

F. 538 to 541, 717. G. 958, 959. J. 230. S. 659, 664, 718. T. 1 Sept. 1885.

(1) In addition to the real rights described in this Book (ownership, possession, servitudes), other real rights which are admitted by the Siamese legislation (lease, pledge, mortgage—which is never established by law—rights of retention and preferential rights) are dealt with in the Book on Obligations.