

In both cases possession may be transferred before, after, or at the same time as, ownership.

98. — A possessor is entitled to avert dispossession or any disturbance by using any means within the limits specified in the provisions concerning Lawful Defence.

G.862. S.926. Cf. Obl. (Lawful Defence) s.143.

99. — A possessor who has been unlawfully dispossessed of a thing by another person is entitled to have the thing returned to him at once, and to receive compensation for injury, unless such other person affords conclusive evidence of a better right over the thing which would entitle him to claim it back from the possessor.

G.861, 985, 986. I.695, 696. J.200. S.927.

Illustration :-A is the possessor of a piece of land. B pretending to be the owner of such piece of land forcibly takes possession of it. A can claim immediate return of the piece of land and compensation for injury.

However if B can show without delay, for instance by producing his land certificate, that he is the owner of the piece of land, A's claim shall be dismissed.

100. — A possessor who is unlawfully disturbed in his possession by another person is entitled to have the disturbance stopped and to receive compensation for injury.

G.862, 1004. I.694, 698, 699. J.198, 199. S.928.

In both cases possession may be transferred before, after, or at the same time as, ownership.

98.—A possessor is entitled to avert dispossession or any disturbance by using any means within the limits specified in the provisions concerning Lawful Defence.

G. 862. S. 926. Cf. Obl. (Lawful Defence) s. 143.

99.—A possessor who has been unlawfully dispossessed of a thing by another person is entitled to have the thing returned to him at once, and to receive compensation for injury, unless such other person affords conclusive evidence of a better right over the thing which would entitle him to claim it back from the possessor.

G. 861, 985, 986. I. 695, 696. J. 200. S. 927.

Illustration:—A is the possessor of a piece of land. B pretending to be the owner of such piece of land forcibly takes possession of it. A can claim immediate return of the piece of land and compensation for injury.

However if B can show without delay, for instance by producing his land certificate, that he is the owner of the piece of land, A's claim shall be dismissed.

100.—A possessor who is unlawfully disturbed in his possession by another person is entitled to have the disturbance stopped and to receive compensation for injury.

G. 862, 1004. I. 694, 698, 699. J. 198, 199. S. 928.